

Dear friends and supporters,

On tve's new regular slot on London's Spectrum Digital Radio, we have focused on The Girl Summit, biodiversity and the sustainable development goals. In tve's 30th year of debate I'm delighted that we have been able to partner with this newly launched Chinese-owned channel to explore the big development issues. Spectrum Digital is a DAB station broadcasting across London and online on www.spectrumradio.net

All change in the Baltic Sea

This year tve teamed up with Germany's Lighthouse Foundation in a dynamic new multimedia, multi-nation project, Baltic Change, tackling environmental challenges in the Baltic Sea. Potential partners from Denmark, Estonia, Germany, Latvia, Lithuania, Russia and Sweden joined us for a workshop on Pilot Island, Germany, to plan the project. We are grateful to Deutsche Bundesstiftung Umwelt for its support.

The joy of tvebiomovies

'I am crying with joy right now...thank you for such amazing news,' one of this year's tvebiomovies entrants wrote to us when we commissioned him to make one of the nine competing films. 'You have given a struggling African filmmaker hope.' You can vote for the hopeful winners in three categories – 'bamboo', 'renewable energy' and 'a world worth protecting' - when the films go live on our YouTube channel on 16 October. Our fifth tvebiomovies competition is sponsored by INBAR, the EBRD and WWF-UK.

Sustainable energy trailblazers for Ashden Awards

We're delighted to have profiled the winners of this year's prestigious Ashden Awards. The trailblazing award-winners have between them transformed the lives of 37 million people with innovations from solar lamps in India to low carbon communities in the UK.

Our 14 fast-paced, one-minute films (watch the films here) were screened at the awards ceremony. We're now starting production on short films on sustainable energy technologies – biogas, cookstoves and solar photovoltaics – for streaming on Ashden's website.
